

2009 Skin-Care Directory

Our inaugural Skin-Care Directory is a list of the leading companies in the natural and organic beauty field. A few years ago, this list may very well have been limited to a few pages. Today, thanks to consumers' interest in a greener and cleaner world, the list has grown tremendously—and continues to do so. Here are the companies who are making strides, both big and small in the ever-changing world of natural and organic beauty. We applaud those who have made the effort and would like to hear from those who are in the midst of doing so. —The Editors

NATURAL AND ORGANIC BEAUTY SEALS

Need help navigating the personal-care aisles at your favorite shop? Here's a list of seals to help you distinguish who's who and what's what in this ever-changing world of organic beauty.

BDIH: This is the Association of German Industries and Trading Firms for pharmaceuticals, health-care products, food supplements, and personal hygiene products. In 1996, working together with leading natural cosmetics producers, the BDIH developed comprehensive guidelines for certified natural cosmetics. www.kontrollierte-naturkosmetik.de

CERTECH: The Canadian environmental, health, and food safety standards certification firm that began offering the Certech natural and organic certification for cosmetics in 2008. www.certechregistration.com

CRUELTY FREE: Manufacturers who use this label have committed to using ingredients that weren't tested on animals or made with animal products or by-products. There are many degrees, within the cruelty-free movement, of living in this manner, and many organizations dedicated to this. Check out www.caringconsumer.com.

DEMETER INTERNATIONAL: This label signifies that the product is biodynamic—meaning that it was produced without synthetic pesticides, fertilizers, and animal by-products. It takes a full year for an organic farm to convert fully to one that is biodynamic. The biodynamic guidelines were created in 1928. www.demeter.net

ECOCERT: Founded in France in 1991, this is an organic certification organization that's based in Europe but conducts inspections in over 80 countries. It's one of the largest organic certification organizations in the world. ECOCERT primarily certifies food and food products, but also certifies cosmetics, detergents, perfumes, and textiles. Products need to include ingredients that are at least 95% natural and 10% organic. www.ecocert.com

FAIR TRADE: This label guarantees that stringent economic, environmental, and social criteria were upheld in the production and trade of an agricultural product. It's only available in the U.S. for chocolate, cocoa, coffee, fresh fruit, flowers, herbs and tea, rice, sugar, and vanilla. www.transfairusa.org

LEAPING BUNNY: Developed by the Coalition for Consumer Information on Cosmetics (CCIC), this label ensures that the product was produced without animal testing in all phases of product development by the company, its laboratories, or suppliers. www.leapingbunny.org

VEGAN: This seal signifies products that are vegan (meaning there are no animal ingredients or by-products, no animal ingredients or by-products were used in the manufacturing process, and they weren't tested on animals. It's administered by the Vegan Awareness Foundation, also called Vegan Action, a non-profit organization. Companies must renew annually. www.vegan.org

NATRUE: A lobby group of leading European natural cosmetics companies that formed its own criteria and definitions for natural and organic cosmetics that offer a comprehensive standard for a unified European labeling system. The label has three grades and covers the ingredients allowed and their minimum and maximum proportion of the contents. www.natrue.eu

THE NATURAL PRODUCTS ASSOCIATION: Offers a new Natural Seal that's regarded as a high-quality standard requiring 95% natural

ingredients and also includes stringent requirements relative to sustainability, health, and safety in personal-care products. www.thenaturalseal.org

ORGANIC & SUSTAINABLE INDUSTRY STANDARDS (OASIS):

Established in 2008 by a trade group (not a third-party certifier), this seal developed two levels of certification—organic (starting at 85%) and made with organic (starting at 70% minimum organic ingredients)—and set goals for increasing the required percentage of organic ingredients in its certified organic products over the next several years. www.oasisseal.org

USDA ORGANIC: This third-party certifier of organic agricultural product/ingredients and processes is viewed by many as the gold standard in terms of organic certification for personal-care products. Products with this seal must contain 95% organic ingredients created without fertilizers or synthetic pesticides, as well as other stringent details. The remaining 5% must only include those synthetic ingredients that are on the USDA's approved list. www.usda.gov

WHOLE FOODS PREMIUM BODY CARE:

Whole Foods launched a new Premium Body Care Standard, a seal that's awarded to 1,200-plus products (and counting) that are sold in its stores. The company also collaborated with the Campaign for Safe Cosmetics (www.safecosmetics.org) to develop buying guidelines and safety criteria for chemically clean and ethically produced skin care. Products with this seal don't contain 250-plus problematic chemicals. www.wholefoodsmarket.com
